Dr. Constanze Stelzenmüller has been a Senior Transatlantic Fellow and Director of the Berlin Office of the German Marshall Fund of the United States since 2005. In this capacity she focuses on U.S.-German relations, transatlantic security and defense issues, EU and German foreign policy, human rights issues, and international law. From 1998 to 2005, she was Defense and International Security Editor at DIE ZEIT, where she covered issues ranging from the war on terror, Iraq, U.S.-German relations, the military intervention in Kosovo and Afghanistan, international war crimes tribunals, and European defense and security policy. From 1994 to 1998, she was a correspondent for DIE ZEIT, covering the conflicts in Rwanda, Congo, and Eritrea-Ethiopia, as well as other human rights issues, refugee crises, and the United Nations.

Dr. Stelzenmüller holds a doctorate in law from the University of Bonn and a master's degree in public administration from the Kennedy School of Government at Harvard University. She has been a Visiting Researcher at Harvard Law School, a Remarque Fellow at New York University, a German Marshall Fund Campus Fellow at Grinnell College, and a Public Policy Scholar at the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars.
